Chapter 1 An Eye Problem David looked at the board. Mrs. Long said to look at the word and write it on their paper. But David didn't see a word. He only saw fuzzy scribbles. He raised his hand. "I don't see a word, Mrs. Long. Only scribbles." David squinted his eyes, and then he started to see the shapes of letters. "If I do this with my eyes, then I can see a little."
"Why don't you sit closer, David, and I'll talk with your parents about getting

your eyes checked.” David could see much better after he moved. He wondered if his eyes were going bad. Would he have to wear glasses? Was he going blind?
Chapter 2 An Appointment When David got home from school, Mum greeted him with a snack. “Your teacher called me this afternoon. She said you were having trouble seeing the board,” said Mum. “I’ve made an appointment with the eye doctor tomorrow.”
“Okay, Mum. Will I have to get glasses?” “I’m not sure. But the doctor will tell us,” said Mum. “Don’t worry. Your dad wears glasses. Lots of people wear glasses.” “I think I’ll look funny in glasses,” said David.
Chapter 3 The Eye Doctor The next day Mum took David to the eye doctor. He sat at a machine

while the doctor looked into his eyes. Then he looked at a chart with letters and numbers. He called them out. The letters and numbers got smaller and smaller. Soon he couldn't see them at all. David sat in a special chair and looked through different lenses. Now he could see the tiny letters and numbers.
"You're going to need glasses," said the doctor. "Your eyes have changed, and you can't see very well. Glasses will fix that." "Let's look at the frames," said Mum. There were so many frames to choose from, so many colours and shapes. "Let's try these blue frames," said Mum. David looked in the mirror. "I don't like these," he said. "How about these silver frames?" said Mum. David tried them on. They were too big.
"I know," he said. "I want to try on

those brown ones.” He looked in the mirror. “Perfect,” Mum said. “You look good in those.” She handed the frames to the doctor. “Your glasses will be ready tomorrow,” the doctor said.
Chapter 4 New Glasses The next time David showed up at school he wore his new brown glasses. “David got glasses,” his friends said to each other. “Do you like wearing them? Can you see better?” “You look great in your new glasses,” said Mrs. Long. “Why don’t you read the sentence I wrote on the board, David.”
David read, “I’m glad David has new glasses. He can read this.” Everyone clapped and smiled. David winked.
